

Wi-Ex begins offering Z-Boost Soho.. does this fight antennagate

August 4th, 2010 by The Droid Guy Leave a reply »

Even putting Antennagate aside, indoor cell reception can be a little tricky sometimes. In homes, offices, condos, townhomes, and apartments structure, metal, and other RF can often detract from your cell phone service. In fact wi-ex, the makers of the Z-Boost Soho, commissioned a survey finding that 67% of cell phone owners had signal problems at home.

So enter in Wi-ex's Z-Boost System. The Droid Guy currently has the Z-Boost metro hooked up in our home and we've seen a noticeable improvement. Considering that there are cell signals for every carrier coming into our home the Z-Boost metro seems to be doing a great job, in fact, I haven't had a dropped call since we set it up. Same thing at the office!

The Z-Boost Soho is available at e-tailers such as Amazon.com and reportedly, Best Buy as well. If you thought you had more bars in more places, with the Z-Boost soho you'll see even 20% more bars in hard to reach places once you set up the Z-Boost Soho. The Soho features one button technology and comes with everything you need to set up your own cell signal repeater.

By The Droid Guy follow me on twitter at <http://www.twitter.com/thedroidguy> or visit <http://www.thedroidguy.com>